The Lyme Disease Association (LDA) participated in grass roots lobbying such as faxing and email to legislators in Washington, DC to support the Lyme disease bills. Also, LDA listed the bill information on its website and sought support. Some phone calls were made and there was some travel reimbursement. In addition, LDA worked on a few state legislative issues by email, fax and phone.

Lyme Disease Association, Inc. (LDA)
990 Narrative 2007

2007 was another busy year for the Lyme Disease Association, Inc. During the year, LDA acquired a number of new affiliates and supporters and opened a Chapter in Eastern Connecticut, bringing the number to 32 other associated volunteer groups that are working together with the all-volunteer LDA, making a difference in the lives of Lyme patients by the services they provide.

LDA's 8th annual conference—Lyme & Other Tick-Borne Diseases: Bridging the Medical Chasm was held in Boston. Jointly sponsored by LDA and Columbia University, with a target audience of physicians and health care providers, the conference provided 8.75 CME (Continuing Medical Education) credits for physician attendees. Almost 9 hours of material on Lyme and other tick-borne diseases was presented by physicians and researchers to an audience of 370, more than half of whom were health care providers. Two of the speakers were international. LDA also provided speakers and assistance for grand rounds/other CME programs for physicians in PA and NY.

The LDA and TFL, its Connecticut affiliate, were pleased this year to bring a major dream to reality: the creation of the Columbia University Lyme & Tick-Borne Diseases Research Center, the first of its kind worldwide to focus on chronic Lyme disease. Dr. Ben Beard, Director, Bacterial Diseases Branch, Division of Vector-Borne Infectious Diseases, Center for Disease Control & Prevention, addressed the opening day Scientific Symposium audience which included scientists, clinicians, and Lyme disease leaders. The Center's Director, Dr. Brian Fallon, internationally recognized for his work with neuropsychiatric Lyme disease, has initiated a number of projects including Mass Spectrometry & Proteomic Diagnosis Study, Brain Mapping & Nerve Pathways, SPECT Imaging in Chronic Lyme Disease, Comparative Lab testing, Tick Studies, and an IV Treatment Study.

LDA is also funding other projects of interest nationally including through NJ Medical School, the identifying of organisms in I. Scapularis using a new technique which can detect genetic sequences of thousands of bacteria and viruses. The technique does not require knowledge or presumption of what is contained in the specimen nor does it require culture. Variants of known agents or mutated microbes can also be identified.

LDA is providing funding for a project at Stony Brook University, NY, where proteins arrays are being developed which could potentially lead to vaccines or diagnostic tools. LDA is also funding research equipment and an education component for a newly opened neuro-muscular center at New York University Hospital, where individuals with autonomic nervous system problems from Lyme will enter into studies where they will be evaluated with state-of-the-art equipment, seeking better treatment options.

LDA is also meeting with government officials to exchange information, forge relationships, and try to coordinate government focus on the disease through legislation, educational programs, and partnerships. In 2007, LDA was accepted as a partner in the Environmental Protection Agency's PESP program. EPA's Office of Pesticide Programs is working towards improving public health by enhancing consumer understanding of the effectiveness of insect repellents and risks of vector-borne diseases by working with numerous federal agencies, industry representatives, public health, and other stakeholders to develop new ways to communicate the effectiveness of insect repellents to consumers, including consistent labeling in pesticides.

In August 2007, LDA was invited to the Vector-Borne Disease Division of the Centers for Disease Control & Prevention (CDC) in Ft. Collins, Colorado. There the LDA president met with the Division in small group meetings and was also able to present to the collective Division the role of LDA and its Chapters and affiliates in research, education, and prevention. Additionally, she presented information on how public policy decisions impact on treating physicians and on sick patients. The lack of a definitive test for diagnosis and for possible ongoing infection was also brought to the table by LDA as was the dearth of funds to address these issues.

LDA was also accepted into the national charities list by the Combined Federal Campaign for 2007.

LDA serves hundreds of thousands of people through its website www.LymeDiseaseAssociation.org, which received almost 26M hits in 2007, its toll free information line which provides recorded information on Lyme continuously, and its ~~email-contact-forms-on-the-website-which-allow-non-medical-questions-to-be-answered.~~ The website also hosts a free doctor referral service and permits free online ordering of all brochures LDA such as the LymeR Primer and its Tick Mark bookmarks for prevention. DVDs are also offered for sale at a low cost LymeAid for Kids, the LDA's fund for children who are uninsured, reached a milestone in 2007, when the giving over the life of the fund surpassed the $100,000 mark. LDA continues to sell at cost its publication, Lyme Disease Is No Fun, Let's Get Well! for children with Lyme and to distribute for free its ABCs of Lyme Disease Written for parents and educators.
